

HISTORY

The neighborhood was named after Philip

Rogers, who owned the land in the mid-1800s. Originally a rural area, the neighborhood began to develop in the late 1800s, as wealthy Chicagoans built summer homes along the lakefront. Beginning in the early 20th century, Rogers Park became a destination for immigrants from all over the world, including Eastern Europe, Asia, and Latin America. This has led to Rogers Park being one of the most diverse neighborhoods in Chicago.

In 1975, the Rogers Park/West Ridge Historical Society was established by local residents who believed their part of Chicago was a place with much to celebrate. They've continued to collect, preserve, and share the neighborhood's history while offering exhibits and architectural tours.

WHAT TO DO?

- Grab tickets for a show at Theatre Above the Law, which puts a fresh spin on classic and new stories with an emphasis on mentoring young talent.
- Take a culinary journey around the world at Caribbean American Bakery, Redz Belizean Restaurant, Asahi Roll Sushi, Taste of Peru, Tostini Turkish Street Food, Khmai Cambodian Fine Dining and beyond.
- Take a tour of "the leather lifestyle" at the adults-only Leather Archives & Museum.
- Walk the Mile of Murals, a community-led public art project that features more than a dozen large-scale murals that beautify the CTA Red Line tracks.

CULTURE

If you want a taste of Chicago's artsy side, Rogers Park is the perfect place to be. Check out the Glenwood Avenue Arts District, an inviting urban stretch with cobblestone streets, sprawling murals, art studios and galleries, an award-winning theatre, and entertainment venues hosting magic shows, cabaret, world music and more.

FUN FACT

Near the lake, you'll find the Emil Bach House, designed by Frank Lloyd Wright. Completed in 1915, it was one of Wright's last Chicago commissions.

Rogers Park is also home to a burgeoning theatre scene, home to both long-standing institutions like The Factory Theatre (creating original shows for 25 years) and newcomers like The Rhapsody Theater (bringing magic, cabaret, and more to a historic space) and Le Piano (jazz club serving small plates, global fare & cocktails).

ROGERS PARK

If you're looking for off-the-beaten-path, under-the-radar Chicago, head to Rogers Park. You'll find architectural gems, authentic global eateries, and a cutting-edge theatre scene, all nestled in this welcoming lakefront enclave. It's one of the city's most diverse neighborhoods, where you'll discover over 60 spoken languages, a treasure trove of cultural experiences woven throughout the thriving arts district, a diverse selection of small independent shops, an international dining scene, and the bustling Loyola University campus.

INSIDER TIP

Conveniently located near the CTA Red Line, Jarvis Square is a bustling commercial corridor with boutiques and antiques, restaurants and pubs, a theater, and coffee shops. You'll find year-round events like artisan markets, Oktoberfest, movie nights, live music, the Jarvis Alfresco community space, and more.
